
THE ONE CLICK GROUP
www.theoneclickgroup.co.uk
Email mail@theoneclickgroup.co.uk

NVIC CONFERENCE
2 October 2009

THE NEW JOURNALISM – CHALLENGING THE STATUS QUO
By Jane Bryant

INTRODUCTION

Good morning everyone. Hi. My name is Jane, Jane Bryant. I'm the Founder and Director of the One Click international health advocacy pressure group based in London UK and I'm very honoured to have been invited to address you here today.

What I'm going to be speaking about is how Britain can be a very dangerous place for children and their families if they fall ill or die through no fault of their own. But most importantly, I'll be talking about hope. Hope for the future and strategies that we can deploy all together to correct injustice and challenge the status quo very effectively indeed, thanks to the internet that has changed everything.

THE ONE CLICK GROUP

The overarching remit of the One Click pressure group is to assist patients and individuals in conflict with the State and powerful corporations.

Together with direct action, One Click also provides an internet based interactive raw news hub, called News On One Click. Our news has many multiple thousands of Opinion Former subscribers from over 100 countries around the world. We are fortunate in that these include doctors, academics, the media, many politicians – from the USA too - health advocates, charities, patients, their families and friends et al.

ONE CLICK ISSUES

Here's the current list of issues that The One Click Group takes up.

- Biodefence and Biosecurity
- Pharmaceutical industry activities
- Government agencies such as the CDC, NICE UK etc.
- Government corruption
- Social Services and the Family Courts
- Data Protection
- Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy/Fabricated and Induced Illness (FII) et al
- Charities' malfeasance exposure
- Iatrogenic death
- Vaccine damage
- Medical research
- Health trials, including miscarriages of justice
- Prions and Prion diseases
- Controversial illness

See One Click Bio

Of all the topics that we cover, vaccines cause the most controversy and generate the most media coverage and attention.

The State interference over the work of One Click because of this list has been absolutely immense. From harassment, police brutality, false arrest, death threats, to constant threats of litigation, we've become used to it as the price of free speech.

Indeed, I've almost got to the stage where if I don't receive a lawyer's letter threatening litigation over an issue that One Click has taken up, we clearly haven't done a proper job and gone far enough!

WHY?

Certain people like myself have been driven by the damage done to our children by illness, indifference and stigma to the point of creating a new communications system. This transcends the typical news systems so deeply compromised and riddled by conflicts of interest.

My child's ill health, together with the maltreatment he endured at the hands of the very doctors, social services and education authorities who should have all had a duty of care to him was great. This persuaded me of the necessity to deploy my public relations skills and insider knowledge of the media, the pharmaceutical industry and government campaigns to benefit him and so many others in his position.

I was previously Board Director of two of the largest Public Relations Consultancies in the world and I've run my own PR company. This means that unfortunately for the Establishment, I had the knowledge and experience to structure an organisation devised to give them the bumpiest evidence ride that I could possibly arrange.

For putting myself on the line like this, I had the best and the strongest of motives.

In 2001, my then ten year-old son Ben was struck down by the Meningitis C vaccine from which there have been so many adverse reactions and deaths. This was followed shortly by Shingles, the varicella-zoster virus that nestles in the spine post Chicken Pox, and then Viral Encephalitis - swelling and inflammation of the brain. Ben didn't die although I thought he would. Now at the age of 18, he is mostly confined to the four walls of his home, in pain and suffering every day with a wrecked life. This is why he can't be with us here today.

When Ben failed to recover from the combination effect of these assaults on his immune system, the doctors diagnosed him with Post Viral Fatigue Syndrome and then Myalgic Encephalomyelitis/Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (ME/CFS) and a host of other stigma labels besides. Ben has also tested positive for severe Mitochondrial Dysfunction.

The stigma from this ME/CFS diagnosis label from which 240,000 people suffer in Britain alone and millions in America too, is immense.

MORE WHY

The Case Of Ean Proctor

One of the most terrible ME/CFS cases in Britain was that of eleven-year old Ean Proctor from the Isle of Man. Starting off with flu, he developed headaches and sore throats all the time. He felt nauseous, sweated profusely, his speech slurred, his memory became impaired and he started to drag his right leg. Ean became semi-paralysed.

Diagnosed with Post Viral Fatigue Syndrome and then ME/CFS just like my son, the psychiatrists thought Ean was faking it and dosed the kid up to the eyeballs with heavy psychotropic drugs. Forget the symptoms, forget what the parents are saying and ignore the child.

To prove that Ean was faking it, the psychiatrists threw paralysed Ean into the deep end of a swimming pool without floating aids. Ean sank to the bottom.

The psychiatrists delivered barbaric Witch Finder General treatment to this physically ill child that they kept in forced psychiatric 'care' by Court Order for over five months. They nearly killed Ean in 1986. The psychiatrist involved was the notorious Professor Simon Wessely.

Has anything changed since the last twenty years and more? Nothing. It is because of cases like Ean's and that of my child that I determined to set up One Click.

Let's take a look to see why it is so difficult to place information on cases like Ean's and so many people who have been damaged by ill-health, vaccines and medical assault in the public domain.

FLAT EARTH NEWS

In 2009, we live with the impact of a corrupted news media on a world that is encouraged to believe stories that are completely false, whilst suppressing others that are true. We live with Flat Earth news.

Iraq Weapons Of Mass Destruction

Flat Earth News such as the so-called 'Iraq Weapons Of Mass Destruction' lie. There were no Iraqi weapons of mass destruction. This deception was escalated by the British government to the media that accepted it unverified and unchecked.

It is this false propaganda that brought Britain into the war against Iraq that millions of Britons demonstrated in the streets to prevent.

The result has been an entirely predicted gargantuan, violent mess with no winners and many deaths, both civilian and military.

Has the British media every apologised for this deception? Never, not once. It is the churning out of false stories such as this that has brought the conventional media into terminal disrepute.

THE NEW JOURNALISM

Challenging The Status Quo

Much to the traditional media's financial consternation, the advent of the internet has now changed everything. We can now share information around the world and publish the evidence, including scientific papers and the results of skewed drugs trials. Information such as this now passes constantly within countries whereas before this type of sharing was an entirely parochial affair.

The current reach of the internet is 550 million people and growing every day. We have on our hands the greatest growth market for information sharing ever seen. Used responsibly, this can and has moved mountains.

PROPAGANDA & PROSTITUTION

Media Corruption

Terrestrial media and broadcasting now employ the sophisticated techniques of the PR industry and a new machinery of government propaganda, both now manufacturing pseudo-news on a huge scale for money and political advantage.

Nowhere is this media interference more clearly illustrated than by the activities of one of the most powerful media moguls of all time, Rupert Murdoch and his International News Corporation. Rupert Murdoch owns a television station, the Wall Street Journal and the Sunday Times just for starters and much else besides. He is known as a brutal and unscrupulous bully. He uses his media outlets as tools to help build alliances with politicians who in return help him with his business. Many of today's corporate media owners impose a political framework on their outlets to generate income. What this means is that the truth is being traded for political favour and commercial advantage.

The Cosy GSK/Media Relationship

The recent appointment of Rupert Murdoch's son James to the board of pharmaceutical industry giant GlaxoSmithKline, revealed the one hand washing the other cosy relationship between big pharma and the media so clearly. James Murdoch's job with GlaxoSmithKline is to help review "external issues that might have the potential for serious impact on GSK's business and reputation."

Largely untested and untried and containing the notorious squalene and thimerosal adjuvants, GlaxoSmithKline's recently launched 'Pandemrix' Swine Flu vaccine is currently being guinea pigged on pregnant women and six month old babies in Britain. From this vaccine alone, GlaxoSmithKline is going to need all the protection it can get from the Murdoch media machine. Remember, there is no such thing as media impartiality. Money drives everything.

Today, pharmaceutical industry and government interference with the media is offered in the style of propaganda and prostitution on a grand scale. Lying by omission is endemic.

BIG PHARMA RULES

Perversion For Profit

Flat Earth news for profit emanates from the pharmaceutical industry every day.

The top five drugs companies combined worth is twice the combined GDP of all sub-Saharan Africa. The pharmaceutical industry uses those levers of power and money to push and deal their products.

Corrupt drug trials funded by the pharmaceutical industry, corrupt peer review and ghost written articles are their staple bread and butter. From this corruption flows many drugs that have not been properly tested, are used off-label and when released on the general population, have been shown to cause damage and death in many.

VACCINE DAMAGE & DISSENT

Nowhere at any time has the injecting of multiple vaccines into the unformed immune systems of the very young been researched. Numerous vaccines containing toxic ingredients and adjuvants are added to the schedule every year.

A stunning example of vaccine damage is that of the Polio epidemics that are now sweeping throughout Nigeria. Caused by the vaccine containing the wild Polio virus, the epidemics are proving impossible to stamp out. The role of the pharmaceutical industry that experiments on people whilst refusing to take responsibility for the consequences is a great deal more than Kafkaesque. The notorious case of British lawyer Sally Clark being a case in point.

Vaccine Damage And The Courts

Sally spent three and a half years in prison having been wrongly convicted of smothering and murdering two of her babies. Five hours before her baby Harry was found lifeless in his chair, he had been injected with the DTP vaccine. Harry's brother, Christopher, was uncharacteristically dozy from the time of his vaccines until he died. Vaccines are such a holy grail in Britain that Sally Clark's own legal team refused to produce adverse vaccine reaction evidence for the jury to peruse at her trial.

Professor Roy Meadow, the author of the widely discredited Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy theory that claims parents invent illness in their children to gain attention, used racing horse odds to announce to the jury in the Sally Clark trial that the probability of two babies' cot deaths in a family were 73 million to one. These figures were subsequently entirely trashed by the Royal Statistical Society and other experts.

Sally Clark was freed only after a huge campaign generated by her supporters exposed this gross miscarriage of justice.

Sally Clark
Abused by the State

When finally released from prison, Sally died shortly thereafter of a broken heart.

Vaccine damage in Britain has become an indicator of child abuse.

Lisa Blakemore Brown – Autism Specialist Psychologist

Many medics are making an absolute fortune out of vaccines promotion such as your Dr Paul Offit For Profit in the United States. Others in Britain and around the world are terrified of challenging the vaccines propaganda for fear of wrecking their careers.

Lisa Blakemore Brown Fighting back

One medical professional who has stuck her head above the parapet for the children and been crucified by the British State for her pains is Lisa Blakemore Brown, a psychologist specialising in autism and related disorders.

Lisa has been hounded by the Establishment for professionally revealing the links between vaccines, Sudden Infant Death Syndrome and defending the Mothers accused of Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy in the courts.

Viciously subjected to vexatious complaints put forward to the British Psychological Society without any foundation, Lisa won every case but the personal cost has been that she developed breast cancer and lost her home to pay the legal fees.

Any medical professional that stands up for these children is likely to face the wrath of the government, the pharmaceutical industry and social services combined.

FREE SPEECH SUPPRESSION

With the media by and large doing such a terrible job mis-reporting the issues described through vested interests and corruption, anyone who has the facility to place evidence in the public domain is under threat. Like me and One Click.

Harassment In The Internet Era Police Brutality & False Arrest

In the early hours of the morning on 26 April 2005, a day I'll never, ever forget, four heavily protected police officers crashed through the front door of my home and arrested me under the auspices of the Harassment Act. The police and their political masters considered that the information published on The One Click Group website and the News Alerts sent round the world to Opinion Formers was harassing members of the Establishment and their policies.

One Click couldn't be sued for defamation or libel in the civil courts because what we publish is entirely true, so instead the police were used to terrify and try to shut us down. They also threatened that unless I cooperated, they would use their powers to remove my very ill child from my care and hand him over to Social Services.

As soon as the police referred this case to the Crown Prosecution Service, it was immediately dropped and no charges were brought. This false arrest was done to me not in a Third World country, but in Britain that is supposed to have democracy and free speech as its watchword. The Establishment is very frightened of One Click.

With the police now having shot their bolt in an attempt to destroy One Click and free speech in 2005, the multiple threats of civil litigation against us escalated sharply, together with much intimidation and death threats.

UK Vaccines Director Threatens One Click

In February 2009, Professor David Salisbury threatened legal action against One Click through his lawyers. Professor Salisbury is the UK government's vaccine director and Chairman of the World Health Organisation's Strategic Advisory Group of Experts on Immunisation, called SAGE.

Salisbury demanded that we remove from our website articles that highlighted his dubious activities in relation to the MMR vaccine. One of these articles was a formal complaint from a charity director over Salisbury's actions submitted to the General Medical Council.

Instead of answering Salisbury's lawyers by private correspondence as is tradition, One Click broadcast his threats and our formal answer to him and his lawyers around the world on our website.

Taking a leaf out of the legal responses book first immortalised by Britain's satirical magazine Private Eye, One Click advised Salisbury and his lawyers To Go Forth And Multiply in public. For our international audience unfamiliar with the short form of the vernacular of Go Forth And Multiply, the verbatim first word starts with F and the second with O. I'm sure you don't actually don't need me to spell out what those words mean.

We had a lot fun. The national media in Britain immediately picked up this story of government Vaccines Director versus One Click. To Professor Salisbury's absolute horror, he was branded in The Independent Newspaper as the Basil Fawlty of the vaccines industry. When the newspapers call anyone Basil Fawlty in Britain, it is a wonderful very British insult of the very best kind.

To give you some background, Basil Fawlty is the lead character in an iconic UK comedy hit series, played by actor John Cleese. Anyone nominated as a Basil Fawlty in Britain is, according to Wikipedia, a snobbish, miserly, xenophobic and sexually repressed paranoiac misanthrope who is desperate to belong to a higher social class.

UK Government Vaccines Director Professor David Salisbury,
'Basil Fawltly' of the vaccines industry

Salisbury's fury at being tagged Basil Fawltly by the press echoed down the corridors of government power in Whitehall and all over his public relations consultancy, Trimedia Public Relations. The dead hand of the public relations industry is behind much with vaccines.

After Salisbury's bully boy exposure, One Click never heard from him or his lawyers again. Yet. When I publish the contents of this speech on The One Click Group website, I guess this may change.

The moral of this story is: Don't mess with the evidence published on One Click because if you do, the court of coalesced public opinion has the power to come back and bite your ass badly.

Sometimes, the winning combination of public satire and truth is the most marvellous defence there is, with the internet being the most perfect delivery system known.

See UK Government Vaccines Director Threatens One Click

HEALTH ADVOCACY IN ACTION

The internet is capable of doing much, much more than just disseminate news, useful though this is. Let me give you but one example.

The Mouse That Legally Roared

Any mouse in the world, no matter how personally poor, can now legally roar in the courts to challenge injustice, thanks to the internet.

In 2007, my young and very ill son decided to launch a High Court legal action against the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence, erroneously enough called NICE. He wanted to challenge their official guidelines on ME/CFS, one of his diagnoses, because of their overt psychiatric bias and appalling treatment suggested for patients. NICE is the unelected quango in Britain that decrees by enforced ruling how doctors must treat their patients and what drugs they may or may not be given. In the American media, NICE is known as The British Death List.

When the Legal Services Commission in Britain – previously known as Legal Aid – refused further funding for this controversial Judicial Review, One Click determined to find another way to help with the legal fees for this case, launched to protect ME/CFS labelled patients.

Using the power and reach of the internet, we structured a campaign for the Judicial Review in the High Court so that anyone and everyone could contribute to its continuance, by word, deed and example if they so wished.

The High Court in Britain

The result was simply extraordinary. Residents from countries around the world flocked to support this campaign including the UK, Canada, America, South America, Australia, New Zealand, Switzerland, Netherlands, Finland, Turkey, South Africa, France, Spain, Ireland, Austria, Monaco, Belgium, Hong Kong, the Channel Islands et al. £5 here, £10 there, $2 from a little boy who contributed his pocket money from the United States were donated. Touching and empowering messages of support rained down. Different currencies and denominations in cheques, cash and credit cards, many of the amounts very, very tiny, globally flooded in to the Fighting Fund Client Account set up by the One Click lawyers to handle this case. We raised many thousands of pounds as we joined hands around the world to fight injustice.

News of our campaign spread like viral wildfire throughout the internet. People raised the funds from their church congregations, from virtual communities set up by online computer games such as Warcraft and all sorts of other methods besides, using great initiative.

People simply took the message of our campaign and using our words, adapted it to appeal to their disparate communities. People decided to pick up this injustice ball and run with it to the four corners of the earth. They didn't even tell us what they were going to do, but simply reported back with their actions and results. We had built a community from around the world to legally challenge injustice in weeks.

The outcome of this incredible work by so many was one of the most important and humbling experiences of my life.

All you need is the assistance of the new types of communications systems available from the internet and above all the most important thing: A great and deserving cause that strikes resonance in the hearts of many because it affects them directly.

I predict that win or lose - lawyers in the audience please take note - this type of campaigning will be deployed to shape the future of legal actions to come. And won't the Establishment just hate it!

GLOBAL FEAR MARKETING

No talk involving vaccines could ever be concluded without referring to Swine Flu. According to the New England Journal of Medicine, this is the virus released on the world by a laboratory accident. How convenient.

History shows that how governments react to 'pandemics' invariably causes more damage than the illness itself. This is certainly true of Swine Flu in Britain.

A relatively mild illness from which most recover with ease, the pharmaceutical industry and the British government have elected to saturate the media with doom laden prognoses of a hundred thousand deaths in this small island alone. So far, we have had 80 deaths.

As the untested and untried Swine Flu vaccine was rushed to market containing the noxious adjuvants of squalene and thimerosal, up to a third of nurses and over half of the family doctors in Britain have announced that they are going to refuse it for themselves.

The Swine Flu handling fiasco in Britain has so far done more damage to the pharmaceutical industry and the British government's promotion of its products than any other initiative that has occurred in my lifetime. In this one salutary episode, their conjoined behaviour has convinced many that they are deadly drug pushers and dealers with vested interests at heart.

ONE CLICK

There is so much else that I could say, but time constraints rule. I hope that my talk has illustrated that by joining hands together from around the world, we have the opportunity to force positive change, thanks to the internet.

It is forever the capacity of parents to severely embarrass their offspring at every turn and I'm no exception. I'm sure that if my son Ben were able to be with us here today, he'd be wriggling in his chair and covering his ears, but I need to say it. Without Ben, The One Click Group website could never have been born. At the age of fourteen and terribly ill, he created the website day by agonising day as his ill-health permitted in shaky fits and starts. He did what I could never have done by myself and could never have afforded to commercially build. I love him for this and for much else besides. Please take a look at the One Click Group website at www.theoneclickgroup.co.uk and subscribe to our news. I don't think you'll be disappointed.

The One Click Group website today carries a vast amount of information, documents, videos, scientific papers and interviews et al on our website. Although we have provided everything completely free for many years, this has to change. Carrying a raw news hub website of this size and with this amount of traffic is becoming way more than I can afford to sustain. One Click has never asked for a penny from anyone to help sustain our work. But we are asking now. If you feel that what we are doing is worthwhile please help us to continue by making a donation.

THE FUTURE

I leave you with this final thought on the new journalism, the internet and its ability to challenge the status quo:

It is not the capacity for the internet to create social unrest that governments around the world have got to worry about, but the social, medical, legal and political cohesion that it can create to challenge the status quo and injustice, breaching all walls and boundaries throughout the world. This is the greatest threat of all.

Barbara, thank you very much for inviting me over from the UK to address the audience today. Thank you all.

TO VIEW THE POWERPOINT PRESENTATION CLICK HERE

Jane Bryant
The One Click Group